

An Amazing Journey

Review of “Finding Emmaus” by Boyd Lundrigan

I have just finished reading “Finding Emmaus” and I feel as if I have just picked up my luggage at the airport terminal, hailed a cab and finally arrived home after an amazing journey ...or stepped out of my personal Star Gate Time-Travel Machine. Such was the quality and intensity of my journey into and out of Ms. Glasner’s book — and mind.

I loved the book! It was a delight to read. Congratulations to Ms. Glasner!

Fraught with all the human characteristics from one end of the moral spectrum to the other, her characters took on a life of their own and, in so doing, allowed me to feel the uniqueness of each.

I can only imagine what the next book will be like with powerful pharmaceutical industry executives, Katherine’s reluctant hero status, Sally’s ulterior motives and the rest of the characters as they flow in and out of one another’s lives — not to mention Frank and Sarah and any other of the empaths that Katherine could call upon at any time!

Ms. Glasner has a wonderful talent and I am pleased to offer her my highest praises on such a wonderful book. Of course, I will be waiting for the next one with great anticipation.

What a great movie it would make; maybe a mini-series! The possibilities are endless.

Once again, congratulations!
